College-bound kids squeezed by cuts

Huge shortfall to hurt arts, too

By BARBARA ERICKSON

With a $5.4 million budget shortfall threatening to cut the sixth period from Richmond Unified secondary schools, officials are anticipating big reductions in the arts program and a squeeze on university-bound youth.

To everyone, the prospect of cutting into the junior and senior high school course offerings is a grim affair, and some are holding onto the hope of a last-minute windfall.

"These are sad days," said retiring Richmond High Principal Lawrence Chapman. "It's very disturbing to be participating in the final days of public education in California."

The district expects to save $1.6 million by cutting periods, mostly in salaries. Final layoff notices have gone out to 57 district secondary teachers.

Junior high principals Rosemary Furlong at Portola and Mary McVittie at Adams say seventh and eighth grade students, always eager to sample different courses, will be denied the chance if the school has only five periods.

At the senior high level elective courses — art, music, drama, business education, consumer home economics, and advanced science — would hurt the most. Students heading for four-year universities such as UC-Berkeley or Stanford would have to plan carefully to meet all the requirements with a limited schedule.

El Cerrito Principal Anna Blackman said industrial arts and music would be cut "almost in half." Many parents have said they will put their children into private schools, she said, rather than have them attend El Cerrito without the usual offerings.

The school has provided a rich music program, but the five period day would eliminate a number of the bands and choruses.

De Anza Principal Frank Granucci said college-bound students will "have to do careful planning" and some seniors will have to attend community college classes to meet their requirements.

The loss of the extra period will hurt 11th and 12th grade students who have been counting on the sixth period to meet university entrance or high school graduation requirements.

Hypnosis: why it's barred from the court

Enhanced testimony is called 'tainted'

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

If you were a crime victim in California who had been hypnotized to help you recall details of the incident, you would not be allowed to testify at your assailant's trial.

A recent state Supreme Court ruling in the Shirley case has called such testimony "tainted," and its exclusion is a matter of grave concern for the Northern California Society of Clinical Hypnosis.

Speaking at a recent scientific meeting of the organization, president Dr. Tom Stern told his colleagues, "What's happening in California is the opening skirmish in what's happening nationwide" in the area of forensic hypnosis.

The Shirley case revolved around a woman who accused a young Marine — Shirley — of rape and oral copulation. The woman, who had been drinking heavily, told the police that she woke up, fully clothed, in her living room to find Shirley threatening her with a knife.

She said that he forced her into the bedroom, made her remove her clothes, had sexual intercourse with her and forced her to orally copulate him. Afterwards, the two went back into the living room and, still nude, sat chatting for some time.

She said that at one point he dressed and went out for beer and then returned. He left when a friend of hers called and came over.

Shirley's story was similar, but he said that she had invited him over, that the sexual intercourse was voluntary and that she did not orally copulate him.

The woman was also taking what Stern called "a whopper dose" of an extremely potent tranquilizer.

The night before the trial, the woman was hypnotized by someone on the prosecution staff, and made some statements that differed from her original testimony. For example, she said that she awoke to find herself in the bedroom, bound and gagged.

At the trial, Shirley was convicted on the rape charge and acquitted on the charge of oral copulation. The case was appealed, and eventually thrown out by the California Supreme Court.

Dr. Paul Minsky, the society's vice-president, called the ruling "a miscarriage of justice."

The court said that the hypnosis did not enhance the woman's memory, but changed it, Minsky explained.

Previously, testimony enhanced by hypnosis was covered by the Harding Rule, which said that the testimony was admissible in court, and that it was up to the jury to determine the "weightiness" of the material.

In the Shirley case, defense witnesses testified:

- That there was no assurance that

The crusading hypnotist

Stern: more doctors using it with patients

Dr. Tom Stern has been involved with hypnosis for half of his 36 years.

"As a psychology major at Stanford, I found (hypnosis) fascinating, and it has remained fascinating," he said.

An earnest crusader for the use of hypnosis in medicine, Stern was the founder of the Northern California Society of Clinical Hypnosis, and serves as its first president.

"I find hypnosis useful in my family practice (in Berkeley)," he said, estimating that he spends about five hours a week using hypnosis in a formal way. He said that it is particularly useful for patients with chronic pain.

Stern said that hypnosis-related techniques were helpful in other ways as well: "if you go into the hospital for surgery and the nurse tells you that you are going to have a lot of pain, and that when it gets bad, they will give you a shot, then you will probably have a lot of pain," he said.

If, on the contrary, you are told that you will experience "the normal amount of discomfort," and that there are things you can do to help yourself, you will probably not suffer as much, he said.

The techniques of hypnosis have been known for many years, he said, but were not practiced widely for pain relief because of the development of anesthetic drugs.

Stern estimated that there are 15- to 20,000 doctors using hypnosis in their practices, and that the number is growing. The society started a year and a half ago with eight members, and now has 200.

The society's function, he said, was to exchange information on hypnosis and push for "quality control" of practitioners.

in the 24-year-old shopping center in October, 1980.

The Encino company hired Gruen Associates, a major Los Angeles architectural firm specializing in shoping centers to come up with plans for modernizing and expanding El Cerrito Plaza.

Paul Hemerberg, the architect who originally designed the center in 1957, was also supposed to assist with the plans.

The expansion would have been a boost to the city since sales tax from the business at the shopping center provides about half of El Cerrito's municipal budget.

YMCA camp seeking kids

ALBANY — The Berkeley-Albany YMCA's Camp Gualala has a few spaces left for 8-13 year olds.

Camp Gualala is located along Sonoma County's Gualala River.

There are three one-week sessions: July 11-17, July 17-24, and July 24-31. Children may participate in one, two or all three weeks of camp.

Eight to ten children of similar age are organized into a cabin with a trained counselor. This cabin group becomes the nucleus of a variety of outdoor adventures including swimmming, boating, archery, crafts, hiking and campfires.

Why hypnosis is now barred from courtroo

hypnosis actually enhanced memory,

- That the process can create pseudo-memories (called "confabulations"),
- That it may be easy to lie under hypnosis because there is a diminished sense of responsibility,
- That the hypnotist gives implicit permission to distort memory, and
- That the process removes all sense of doubt on the part of the witness.

The prosecution offered no expert witnesses, Minsky said.

The court ruled that hypnosis increased the subject's suggestibility and dimished critical judgment. It also said that subjects might confuse confabulated testimony with what actually happened, and that their unwarranted confidence in their testimony made them unshakable under cross-examination.

According to Tom Orloff, Alameda County deputy district attorney, "the Shirley case stinks."

He said that the court "picked this one atypical case and used it to decide a sweeping issue like hypnosis."

The rule means, he said, that "if one of you therapists hypnotizes a traumatized rape victim, she can't testify and I can't prosecute."

Orloff cited the recent case of a man who was convicted this year for multiple sexual offenses. Two of his early victims were hypnotized in 1978 by Union City police.

"No new information was obtained and no one was charged at that time," he reported. "However, according to Shirley, those counts would have to be thrown out." The case is now on appeal.

He also discussed a Fremont rape case, in which a woman was abducted outside her home by two men who then raped her. She was later hypnotized, but provided no new details.

A 14-year-old girl was subsequently raped by two men who grabbed her at a bus stop. One of the men left a T-shirt with his name on it at the scene of the crime, and he and a companion were soon arrested.

The men confessed to both rapes, but were charged only with the second one, because under the Shirley ruling, the first victim cannot testify.

"This, unlike Shirley, is a righteous rape," Orloff said.

"This is a good strong case," he went on, "and I want to litigate it all the way up, to give the court a true picture" of how hypnosis is used in the criminal justice system.

The Shirley decision was modified recently in two regards: at first the court said that all cases currently on appeal would fall under Shirley, but then modified it so that the ruling is no longer retroactive. The decision was also modified to allow defendants to be hypnotized, although victims and witnesses may not be.

The court rejected the use of procedural guidelines for forensic hypnosis. Minsky cited the rules in use in New Jersey as an example of the kind of safeguards that can be instituted:

- Forensic hypnosis must be done by a psychologist or psychiatrist;
- The hypnotist must be independent of both the prosecution and defense;
- The witness must describe the facts before hypnosis;
- All contacts between the hypnotist and the witness m fought the courts and the railroads and the developers to keep them from putting the coast highway through her land," she said. "The book is not about that woman. It just served as a way to write a story about families and friendships."

The novel is not Streshinsky's first book. That was a non-fiction account of a woman who survived a small plane crash in the high country of the Sierra Nevada, titled "And I Alone Survived." It was made into an NBC television movie.

"It (the book) was very successful and showed me I could write that kind of book," she said. "Then after it came out, my editor said 'why don't you try fiction?' So I did an outline and got a contract for a novel. But I didn't know if I could write fiction."

Her 16 years of journalism experience, however, prepared her well for the novel:

"A lot of my writing has been New Journalism style, with lots of the details of living. And I learned about writing dialogue when I was interviewing a woman whose husband had been murdered. She was watching me take notes and got nervous and distracted, so I put away my notebook and just listened. When we'd take a break I'd write down what I remembered of the conversation and I got pretty good at it, catching the intonations of speech. You get to know what rings right, what sounds right."

Streshinsky did the background research for her novel in the library.

"I love libraries and going through old newspapers," she said. "Reading newspapers is a wonderful way to get history, because you have to read it one day at a time and absorb it at the same rate people did when it really happened.

"When I wrote the book, my mother and I and my kids rented a house at Malibu, so I could get a feel for the place. We roamed the hills and beaches and canyons, many of which are untouched and much the way they must have been during the time I was writing about in the book, when southern California was undeveloped."

Part of the book was set in China and for help she went to her husband, Ted Streshinsky, a well-known photographer.

"I got the atmospheric details from Ted, who grew up there. His family was one of many Russian Jewish families who immigrated to China."

The title of the novel, "Hers the Kingdom," was not Streshinsky's idea.

"The paperback publisher (who bought those rights before the hardback was published) said the title would help sell books," she said.

"I wanted to call it 'Birds of Prey,' because Willa, one of the main characters, is an expert on raptors — hawks and eagles. And that was what the book was about. About how men and women, like eagles, make nests and work to give themselves freedom and then are tied to their nests and their families.

"I'm 47 and I haven't set any speed records, but I've worked slow and steady, raised a family and kept working, and I've also made some space in my life for friends. I think long-term friendships are very important."

Streshinsky said her husband works at home, and sometimes on the road or abroad. (His work has appeared in every major American magazine and he now works mostly for Time-Life Books.) She, however, prefers to write in a small rented office in downtown Berkeley.

"I like my life when I'm writing a book," she said. "When I'm doing an article it's on my mind all of the time, but a book allows you to pace yourself.

"I'm a morning person and start writing no later than 9 a.m. I need a stretch of hours and when I'm going the time really flies. Mostly I enjoy it. I've done a lot of writing I haven't enjoyed, though.

"I get frightened near the end of a book because I get so involved in this fantasy world that I enjoy going to work. Then I tell myself that this is neurotic, that I've moved into a fantasy world and prefer it to the real world, and my real world is pretty nice.

"My husband said that's not neurotic because the book's got to end."

She said she wants to take more time with her next writing project.

"When I was writing 'Hers the Kingdom' the action started coming so fast that I worried about getting it all down and I concentrated so much on that I couldn't fine-tune the writing.

"The best part of writing is when things are really going well and a line pleases you — and there are probably only a few in the book that really please me. The worst part is when it isn't working and you go into all sorts of rituals to avoid starting to write, like emptying the waste-baskets."

Streshinsky never slows down, though.

"I have to write all of the time, some every day. As soon as I finished the book, I did a flurry of magazine articles. The next piece is due out in July in Redbook and I'm starting on the next novel..."

mouth Congregational Church in Oakland, Wirt also had the distinction of establishing the first Christian church in Alaska. He was the father of Dr. Williston Wirt, who later became the pastor of the church from 1949 to 1956, and is Caine's uncle.

In the early days of the church, its north Berkeley neighborhood was mostly residential. Today, however, the neighborhood has changed and so has the church.

"Originally, the church was in the midst of lovely homes," said the Rev. Robert Graham, the current pastor. "Now we're completely surrounded by student housing, and most students are indifferent to the church. Most north Berkeley churches are experiencing the same problem. There were so few young people in this church in the mid 1970s that we had to close our church school on Sunday."

Graham said that in the mid to late 1950s, when church membership and attendance were at their peak throughout the U.S., the North Congregational Church had a membership of about 300. Today it is about 230, most of them middle-aged and elderly people.

Edward Caine said the congregation's focus and political stance changed in 1967, when it withdrew from the United Churches of Christ and joined the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches:

"We grew tired of the UCC's national trend of change from Biblical study to liberal programs of social action and political im

"Our congregation vative," he said. "Of conservative in Berke in Podunk, Iowa, we liberals.

"We're more inte worth of the individual ly oriented than the U of Christ. We think reach should be the m local churches."

Graham said his ch an infusion of young ideas if it wants to last is to survive, a group terested in social progr to come in and chal sis."

In the past teachers have had free periods for preparation time scheduled at various times during the day. Under the five-period day all teachers would have this at the same time, probably the first period of the day.

Students would arrive later at most schools, from 9 to 9:30 a.m., and leave somewhere between 2:15 and 2:45 p.m. El Cerrito would lengthen its periods from 45 to 50 minutes.

In addition to losing course offerings for students, the schools will also lose valuable teachers.

"We have some stunning, wonderful teachers who are going to be terminated," said Kennedy Principal Pat Rupley.

Richmond Unified's five-period day would mean that the district is the second in the East Bay to reduce secondary courses to that level. Three years ago Fremont schools, with an enrollment of 25,000 students, were forced to cut ninth through 12th grades to five periods, the minimum required by state law, and reduce graduation requirements from 220 to 210 units.

Richard Carroll, director of secondary education in Fremont, said the arts program suffered greatly and electives are now limited to vocational and college prep courses.

Philip Brazil, associate superintendent in Fremont, said college-bound students have been able to meet University of California requirements, but, he said, "they are not competitive with kids who take six or seven periods."

The loss of arts eliminates a balance in the program, he said, and removes a sense of spirit from the high school campuses. Out of five high schools, for example, only two have been able to maintain marching bands.

Brazil and Carroll said many Fremont juniors and seniors supplement their studies at community college and adult school classes, but budget cuts are threatening this choice as well.

By contrast to Fremont and Richmond, Berkeley High has nine periods a day, and students attend classes from a minimum of five to a maximum of eight periods. At Albany High students take six or seven periods, and students in Oakland High Schools attend six periods.

Some members of the Richmond Unified staff are clinging to a slim hope that money may come through at the last minute, but the June election results did not give them any grounds for optimism.

Rupley said she is preparing two contingency plans, for six- and five-period days. If the funds come through somehow, she said, the district will have to scramble to hire back staff.

At the school level the prospects look especially sad, Rupley said. "We're working with real people," she said, "and not just numbers on a piece of paper."

Learning how to fix plumbing & wiring

ALBANY — Four short home maintenance courses for adults with little or no electrical or plumbing experience will be offered by Albany Adult School this summer.

"Basic Plumbing" will present helpful information about water emergencies, unclogging drains, faucet repairs, toilet flush valves, pipe types and fix-it-yourself tips.

Two identical three-meeting courses will convene at Albany High School from 7 to 9 p.m. One course meets on Thursdays starting June 24; the other meets on Tuesdays starting July 13.

"Basic Wiring" consists of do-it-yourself lectures and demonstrations about switches, shorts, plugs, outlets, hazards, small appliance repair, breakers, cord and plug repairs.

Two identical three-meeting courses will convene at Albany High School from 7 to 9 p.m. starting Tuesday, June 22 or Thursday, July 15.

The tuition is $14. For registration or other information telephone Albany Adult School office at 526-6811.

Arts

He turns his rage into steel art

Thinking big for his M.F.A.

By TERRY TOCZYNSKI

ALBANY — A 5-year-old boy in a suburban Chicago kindergarten peered over at the landscapes his classmates were painting and wondered at the narrow band of blue than ran across the top of each paper.

The sky doesn't really look like that, he thought, and he trotted outside to see for himself.

"That was my first consciousness of wanting to draw things as they really looked," said the boy 20 years later.

Albany resident Bruce Horton, whose art works will be exhibited during the Masters of Fine Arts Exhibition at the University Art Museum in Berkeley starting June 16, has gone through dramatic personal and artistic trials since that first flash of inspiration.

Horton remembers being acutely unhappy throughout his childhood and adolescence, and as an artist he has turned the anger and frustration he grew up with into bold creations.

The 6-foot, 3-inch, 225-pound artist no longer draws things as he sees them, either. He now specializes in producing enormous steel sculptures. Through those sculptures he said he hopes to communicate the sense of power he lacked as a youngster.

The summer exhibition is the final requirement for the 29 students completing their masters of fine arts degree. Horton will be showing samples of his "stereodrawings" and "stereophotographs," which he said are meant to be viewed with crossed eyes to produce a 3-D effect, as well as a gigantic steel sculpture.

An avid athlete and a former defensive lineman for his high school football team in Lafayette, Horton said, "Steel sculpture is the perfect blend of art and sports." He explained that while he still loves painting and continues to draw, he was badly in need of an artistic medium that would give him a physical outlet.

"And steel is the perfect punching bag."

When he is working on a sculpture, Horton said, "I go from intense rage to a feeling of satisfaction." He said that through the building process he works out the pressures and tensions of daily life.

"Rather than hit somebody I go throw steel around for an hour."

Big, blond and bearded, Horton sat in the center of his small, cluttered living room, surrounded by bright paintings, ink drawings and gigantic metal tools. He talked intensely about his life and his art.

Horton said he started his art education seven years ago in the UC-Berkeley Art Department, doing "photorealistic" paintings and drawings.

At first, Horton said, "I wanted to be able to look at anything and draw it as it looked. I thought that was the ultimate power to have."

But the paintings he produced were often angry, and didn't fit into the artistic style encouraged at Berkeley. He said that few people in the art department liked them.

"They just weren't accepting my work," he sighed.

By the end of three years, Horton was completely frustrated with what he called a lack of appreciation for his work. Besides, he was restless to do something more energetic.

"I was very active all during my youth," he said. "I played sports all the time. Then I started painting. With painting I was developing intellectually, but physically I was deteriorating...I wanted to get physical."

So Horton cleaned out his art locker on the third floor of Kroeber Hall at UC-Berkeley, and moved down to the ground floor, to the noisy rooms that look out onto the sculpture patio.

There, with the help of a few professors who had faith in him and allowed him time to develop, the young artist effected a major change in his work.

Horton said he made his first project by simply welding together old car doors. But as he got more enthusiastic about the work, he also got more daring. Now Horton claims to have intimate knowledge of all the junk yards in Richmond, and he pieces together a variety of bold geometric shapes for his imposing creations.

Some nine of Horton's giant steel works have been displayed outdoors on the UC-Berkeley campus over the past three years, but not without some controversy.

Horton complained that his displays were often vandalized and dismembered, and the university complained that they were hazardous.

Because of all the trouble, Horton said, sounding somewhat bitter, last year the university finally removed one of Horton's pieces from the grounds with a crane; Horton said he ended up suing the university to recover his beloved piece.

The steel sculptor began to develop his artistic talents as a child growing up in Lafayette. He said that art became

Barbecuing: it's not just for men

I'm not sure why barbecue cooking seems slanted towards men. Maybe guarding the food over the fire dates back to primitive times. Maybe it's because at one time, cooking over coals required the chopping of wood (man's work). Or perhaps it was a way of keeping Father from messing up the kitchen. Whatever the reason, it certainly is not a sex-linked activity today.

With match-lit charcoal briquets or our new style gas grills and kettles, outdoor cooking is just plain easy for everyone. But if the man of the house wishes to preside, that's OK by me.

Whether it's steak or ground beef, one of the easiest and tastiest variations to use is to prepare a flavored butter, chill it and cut into patties, and then serve one or two pieces on the steak or hamburger just as it comes from the freezer. These butters can be made in rolls, wrapped and refrigerated until needed (for indoor cooking too), or mashed into a bowl and brought to a soft (room temperature) consistency for spreading. Try these.

Blue Cheese Butter

1 cube butter
1/2 c. blue cheese
1 clove garlic, minced
1 T. chopped chives or green onions
2 T. brandy

Cream butter and cheese until well blended. Add remaining ingredients, mix well, and form into a log. Wrap and chill. Slice off a patty or two for topping a freshly grilled slice of flank steak. Ymmmm.

Anchovy Butter

1 cube butter, softened
1 t. lemon juice
2-oz. can of anchovy fillets

Blend well, roll into log. Then roll log in chopped parsley. Wrap and chill.

Mustard Butter

1 cube butter, softened
2 t. lemon juice
2 t. minced parsley
1/4 t. salt
dash pepper
2 T. Dijon-style mustard

Beat until fluffy, cover, and chill. Spread it on hamburger or steak. Try it on liver, which grills beautifully.

Basil Butter

1 cube butter, softened
1/2 c. chopped fresh basil leaves or 2 T. dried basil
2 T. minced parsely
1 T. lemon juice
1/4 c. grated Parmesan

Beat or blend, cover, and refrigerate. Very good on baked potatoes, zucchini, or fish.

An exotic garnish

If you're an oyster lover, try this elegant touch to your filet steak.

Grill thick filets over charcoal about 1 minute on each side and then cover with a hood (or make a little one of foil) to finish smoke cooking.

Take another sheet of heavy foil and put on it thin rings of onion, thin rounds of lemon slices and some large oysters, drained. Brush with melted butter and place on grill to heat and smoke as steaks cook. Pile some of the onion rings on each steak, top with a lemon slice, a smoked oyster, and a grinding of black pepper.

Here's an exotic curry-butter basting sauce for a thick ham slice:

Blend 4 T. melted butter with 1/4 t (or more) of curry powder. Add about 1 T. of the syrup drained from chutney. Baste the ham steak with this mixture and serve it with a wedge of cantaloupe and a teaspoon of the chutney.

Speaking of ham

Ham and honey are natural partners. Try this glaze; especially good if you are using a covered grill to bake a ham.

Combine 3 T. honey, 1 T. worchestershire, 1 T. dry mustard, 3/4 t. ground ginger, and a dash of black pepper. Brush the ham with it several times towards the end of its cooking time.

In case you haven't tried it recently, fish is great for barbecue. You can grill it whole (stuffed) or if you are careful in handling it, you can do thick slices nicely. This zippy marinade makes white fish special.

Orange-Soy Marinade

Mix together:
1/2 c. soy
1/4 c. catsup
1/4 c. parsley, chopped
1/2 c. orange juice
2 cloves garlic, finely minced
2 T. lemon juice
1 t. pepper

Marinate thick slices of white fish in this mixture for at least 1 hour. Grill the fish and brush with marinade while cooking. Enjoy!

Good go-alongs

- Vegetables on skewers can be prepared ahead and put on the grill just before the meat is done. Use cherry tomatoes, zucchini chunks, artichoke bottoms, bell peppers, onions, big mushrooms...
- Fruit kabobs made with orange slices, apple wedges, pineapple chunks, and a thick slice of banana can be basted with ginger butter made by melting 1 cube butter and blending with 2 T. sugar and 1 t. ground ginger...
- Cold salad of cooked rice tossed with chopped fresh mushrooms, chopped cooked eggs, chopped green peppers, and a light vinaigrette dressing.

Eating outdoors is special whether it's a pool-side barbecue or a front porch cookout on a small hibachi. And if Dad wants to do it, great! Even if it ends up being twice as much work to haul the fixin's in and out.

Horton's steel art

his refuge from the tensions of his authoritarian household, and his means of achieving recognition in a school where he felt unwanted.

At home, Horton said, he learned to cherish solitude, for during his moments alone the fledgeling artist could cool some of the hostilities generated in his regimented family life. He would close himself in the sanctuary of his room and read and draw for hours.

But Horton, who has worked with his father for 10 years as a newspaper pressman, said that despite his parents' militaristic ways, they always encouraged their middle son's artistic endeavors.

"My father really taught me how to draw," the sculptor said. "He was dedicated to developing his child's talent. He views art as something valuable and something to be proud of."

At school, Horton said, he was not accepted.

"Even though I was a big kid," he said, "I was picked on by the other students, because I was also very pacifistic. I experienced a lot of humiliation and a lot of anger."

Horton said that about the only thing the other kids admired about him was his uncanny ability to reproduce the drawings of comic book characters.

"So then art turned into an obsession," he said. "It was the one thing in which I could be the best out of 100. I doubled and redoubled my efforts so that I could prove myself through art. So I could shine."

And when Horton entered high school he also began to excel at sports. Fianally, he said, the anger that had been accumulating in him throughout the years could be vented — in wrestling matches, at track meets, in soccer games, and through football. Especially football.

"It was good," he said, "because I could beat heads and also do well."

Horton said he builds his steel sculptures with his own childhood in mind, and intends for his monuments to be used and appreciated by children.

"I know how I felt when I was a kid," he said, "How it felt to have no power and no control over my life. I want to give kids something now.

"I want them to play on (the structures). I get no greater joy in life than when I see kids hanging on the end of one of my sculptures."

AC Transit hikes bus fares

AC Tranist, facing a projected multi-million dollar deficit, has increased bus fares for all riders, including a 20 percent increase in the cost of local rides for adults, and a 25 percent increase in the cost of the least expensive transbay ride for adults.

The increases, which were approved unanimously at a board meeting June 9 in Oakland, will take effect on July 1.

The new fares include the following changes:

•Local fares for adults will increase from 50 cents to 60 cents.

•Intercity express rides for adults will jump from 50 to 60 cents for one-zone rides, from 75 cents to 85 cents for two-zone rides; and from $1 to $1.10 for three-zone rides.

•Transbay rides for adults will increase from $1 to $1.25 for zone one, from $1.25 to $1.50 for zone two, and $1.50 to $1.75 for zone three.

Youth and student fares, for those ages 5-[illegible] go trom 25 cents to 40 cents for local rides, and [illegible] fares will be hiked 20 cents.

Senior citizens and handicapped bus riders [illegible] pay more, 15 cents for local rides rather than [illegible] Transbay rides for these riders will be increased [illegible] cents.

Adults, youth and seniors will also pay [illegible] monthly passes. Adult passes for local rides will [illegible] $18 to $24, while youth passes will be increased [illegible] $14 and local passes for seniors will jump from [illegible] $4.

On July 1, at the same time that the new [illegible] come effective, a new policy will eliminate transfers [illegible] BART to AC buses.

The fare increases will boost revenues by [illegible] million, which will help offset AC Transit's [illegible] operating deficit during the coming fiscal year.

Special buses do park visits

A picnic in the park will soon be just a telephone call away for members of non-profit groups in Alameda and Contra Costa counties, thanks to a bus program sponsored by the East Bay Regional Park District and AC Transit.

The program, which will last from June 18 through Sept. 10, is intended to serve organizations such as church and school groups, senior citizens' clubs, organizations for the handicapped, and urban low-income groups.

Two buses will be available for the program with a minimum capacity of 35 passengers and a maximum of 45 passengers per bus. The service will operate between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on weekdays only.

Buses will operate only within the two counties and will travel only to parks of the East Bay Regional Park District.

The destination must be no more than 30 minutes travel time from where the group is picked up, although exceptions will be allowed for longer travel time to unique district natural resources.

There is a charge for the bus service of 50 cents per passenger. The program requires reservation two weeks in advance, and payment of the transportation fee five days in advance. The payment will be forfeited if a group cancels its trip less than 24 hours before departure.

The Park District's coordinator for the program will be Kimberly Lenz. Reservations and more information can be obtained by telephoning 531-9300, extension 261.

The prescheduled group service bus program is part of the Park District's 1982 Summer Bus program which includes special summer bus service by AC Transit to Don Castro Regional Recreation Area near Hayward, Point Pinole Regional Shoreline in Richmond, and Tilden Regional Park in Berkeley.

These special buses run between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily, and are available to the general public.

AC Transit provides regularly scheduled bus service year-round to a number of other regional parks, including Alameda Creek Trail in Fremont, Crown Memorial State Beach in Alameda, Garin and Dry Creek Pioneer Regional Parks in Hayward, Mission Peak, Pt. Isabel, Redwood Regional Park, San Leandro Bay Regional Shoreline in Oakland, Lake Temescal, and Wildcat Canyon.

For fare and bus schedule information, call AC Transit at 653-3535.

Albany Sch Board OK improveme plans for '8

By TERRY TOCZYNSKI

ALBANY — The Albany School Board meeting approved the 1982-83 school plans for Marin, Cornell and Albany with little discussion.

The board also previewed the selection the new Albany High School principal, progress of proposed improvements in the computer program and considered expansion for gifted and talented students.

At the May 25 board meeting the high provement proposal became the subject of as board members questioned substantial plan. But the high school site council, which plan, took the board's criticism to heart, and two weeks effected several of the changes.

Board member Peggy Thomsen, who at meeting had voiced some of the strongest plan, told site council representatives, "I reacted in such a positive manner. I really it."

And Jean Tenret echoed her gratitude pleased that the site council took the board seriously."

Because the board had objected strongly portion of the high school improvement budget for staff salaries, one of the major modifications the plan was the elimination of the position coordinator.

High school principal James Walker "(Next year's) principal will take a more signi the leadership of the council," with the hel council secretary.

Board president Gerald Brunetti prais school improvement plans approved at the said they were "well conceived and well and he thanked the site councils for taking make the recommended adjustments.

Brunetti also commended the design of High School principal selection process, which begun.

Superintendent Stephen Goldstone board with a 17-step plan that emphasizes of input from the staff, students, parents and nity.

Goldstone said that high school teache and their parents will be given the opportu requests concerning the desired qualificatio principal, to submit questions for the inter applicants, and in some cases to sit in on the

According to the plan, interviews of qua dates should begin on July 21, and the board appoint the new principal on July 29.

Also at the high school, the computer on its way to implementation for next year.

According to assistant superintendent senquist, the district is in the process of acq ticated "expandable" computer equipment school at an extremely favorable price.

Rosenquist said he could not reveal the purchase deal because the process has not ed. But he assured the board that computer been advising the computer task force in its best possible system at the best possible pri

He asked the board to accept a tentative computer program design, saying, "We're o something very good. We will come back to more details."

Although some members of the board having been informed earlier of the projec the board agreed that teaching computer great importance, and it gave its blessing to efforts of the computer task force.

Also in preparation for the future, the look at the district's programs for gifted and dents, to consider both program improvem sion.

Craig Boyan, district director of speci that new state legislation allows for more ever before in determining which students special programs.

He explained that the state used to m teria to be used in identifying gifted or tale but that under the new law each district can eligibility guidelines.

No longer must the school district depe other tests scores for placement of students richment or independent study programs. And no longer are the gifted programs limite demic achievers.

Boyan said that now individual teache mend students whom they feel can excel in leadership, art, drama and creative writi strictly academic subjects.

The administrative team, which incl Goldstone and Rosenquist presented the b meline for redesigning the gifted and talen each Albany school. They projected that could be implemented for the 1983-84 scho

The team has planned a series of me school site councils during the coming scho no program is pushed through without site al.

Boyan said that the team does not ex request much more funding for modifica sions of the programs. By moving mon reallocating funds, he said, most of the c covered.

Nevertheless, the proposal cites t sources of funding: school improvement fu eral block grant and categorical funding Gifted and Talented Education Program.

Weeds and fire safety

By JAMES E. ALLEN, Jr.
Mayor

EL CERRITO — The primary purpose of this column is to provide the community with timely and important information that increases residents' awareness of the various programs, services and activities of the El Cerrito city government.

On occasion, the subject matter covered is somewhat controversial because it may relate to a critical issue being faced by the City Council. The intent is to provide you with a broad council perspective on the issues and supply factual information that will assist you in formulating your own thoughts or opinions on the issue

One very vital but non-controversial program the city becomes involved in annually is the Weed Abatement Program. About this time every year the El Cerrito Fire Department, under the auspices of the City Council, concentrates its fire prevention efforts in this program to reduce potential fire hazards that can be caused by high grass, weeds and other rank growth in many areas of the city.

The weed abatement program, which is governed by city ordinance, begins with identifying all vacant lots that have conditions which could create a fire problem. Once identified, the department receives authorization from the council to legally notify all relevant property owners that these conditions exist on their land. Notice is served by official letter and a written notice posted on the property. Owners are given 30 days to correct the conditions. If owners don't comply by this deadline, the ordinance allows the city to perform the work and bill the owner for all costs involved.

If any bills are not paid, the property becomes encumbered by a tax lien which has to be paid when property taxes are due. Generally, most property owners cooperate; however, enforcement is vigorous to insure protection of life and property.

The Fire Department is very aggressively pursuing the weed abatement program this year. Of course, with the hillsides and open areas in El Cerrito, the concern about fire is heightened every summer. This winter rainfall has produced an unusually lush growth and weeds in many areas of the city, and fire pre efforts must be increased accordingly.

The Fire Department is not concerned weeds on vacant lots. If your home is exposed to tion needing abatement of a potential fire hazar of dry grass but of any debris, call the Fire Depart 237-2123 and an investigation will be made. The ment will make every effort to assist you in resol problem.

Obviously, the City Council and Fire Dep concerns go far beyond fire hazards caused by and weeds. Efforts are being concentrated in all fire prevention for you and your home. A variet programs, services and information are available or dropping by one of the two fire stations. Inf anu advice on smoke detectors and portable guishers are available; home fire safety tips and can be obtained; and helpful hints on EDITH (E in the Home) are free for the asking. Take adva these services. And please, for your sake, neighbor's sake, be fire safe!

Dancing made easy

EL CERRITO — Dance instructor Belinda Rickleffs is now offering summer dance lessons for teens and adults.

Dance sessions include instruction in country-western, party dancing, rumba salsa, foxtrot and waltz, New York hustle and cha-cha.

Country-Western and party dancing will begin Tuesday, June 15. Each class combines precise instruction in steps, styling, leading and following, with an opportunity to dance and meet people.

In addition to the Tuesday classes, each session also includes a class on Friday followed by a field trip to a Bay Area dancing spot.

For further information on registration fees and class dates please call the El Cerrito Community Center at 525-6748.

ALBANY — Two speed reading and comprehension training programs are being offered by the Albany Recreation Department.

The first program, for youngsters 11 to 15 years old, teaches reading process and comprehension skills.

The average student increases reading comprehension from one to three grade levels, while more than doubling reading speed.

The second program, for students 15 and older and adults, will teach you to read two to four times faster in academic and professional reading material, while significantly improving comprehension, concentration, and recall.

For information call 644-8514.

Artists show at street fair

Four local artisans will participate in the 29th annual Upper Grant Avenue street fair.

It will take place Saturday and Sunday, June 19 and 20, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Local participants include: Lobsang Khendup of El Cerrito will show wooden toys. Nancy Maloney of Albany shows sculptures.

Minoru and Mishi Nomija of Kensington offer pottery and Don Vichman of Albany makes cloisonne jewelry.

The fair will be held on upper Grant Avenue between Vallejo and Filbert Streets, San Francisco.

Church's new music chief

THOUSAND OAKS — Minda Azarcon has joined the staff of Epworth United Methodist Church as director of music.

Azarcon, a native of the Philippines, is working in the U.S. through the National Council of Churches as a music scholar and teacher. Her most recent position was music director for Chestnut Street Baptist Church in Philadelphia.

Azarcon was graduated from the University of the Philippines with the highest honors and holds five degrees including a master of music in piano. Her work has ranged from concert halls to the opera guild. Besides holding the positions as chairperson of the music department of the Philippine Christian University in Manila and choir director of the Cosmopolitan Church of Manila for 20 years, she also was the first female music director in Philippine movies.

Whale lovers rejoice

The Whale Center thoroughly appreciates the splendid article your reporter, Terry Kinikki, wrote for the June issue. Not only did she give full coverage to Cinco May's Whale Bus program, but she also produced a thoughtful, carefully crafted piece. The photograph by Chris Gilbert encompassed all the elements we wished to stress; besides, what a nicely composed picture.

Your feature will help us in our efforts to fund next fall's Whale Bus program. So many schools asked for it, but could not be fitted into the tight time schedule, that we are hoping to offer the whale skeleton to every school child who missed it the first time around.

Again, many warm thanks for the coverage.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Wynne

Thanks for the tour

(A copy of the following letter, sent to Albany City Administrator William Haden and fire Chief Koepke, was sent to this newspaper for publication.)

Dear Mr. Haden and Chief Koepke,

Our classroom would like to thank you for letting it be possible for us to visit City Hall and the Fire Department on June 3. Before our visit, we started discussing career education in our classroom. We talked about the different kinds of occupations available to us. We found that it was much more interesting going to City Hall and observing real occupations.

Because of the amount of children, we had to split into two groups, each with a different schedule. The first half enjoyed a tour through a bunch of shiny red engines. We explored the dorms and the lounging room of the fire house.

The other groups also enjoyed role playing council persons. We also learned how cities began, about boundary laws, how laws are presented to City Council and how they are worked out.

When we arrived back at school, we realized how we liked career education. Most children then thought about what job they would like when they got older. In the long run, this was a very satisfying field trip. Thank you again.

Sincerely,
Mary Lackey

Falklands history

English explorer John Davis in 1592 discovered what are now known as the Falklands. Captain Strong landed there in 1690 and named the islands for Viscount Falkland, then treasurer of the English navy.

Just after the Seven Years' War (in which France lost what would become Canada), the French in 1764 founded a settlement on the Falklands. They left when the British established a colony there the following year, and immediately sold their rights to Spain. But the latter relinquished those rights six years later. British rule on the islands was reestablished in 1833.

In 1816 the United Provinces of La Plata (what was later to become Argentina) broke from Spain and in 1928 Argentina questioned validity of British claims to the Falklands.

The historical record supports the British. That the two large islands lie about 400 miles east of the Argentine coast gives Argentina no more claim than the U.S. would have upon the Bahamas — a British island Commonwealth — lying 100 to 500 miles off Florida.

That Argentina (with its unelected government) would seize the Falklands is most tragic. The aggression continued another 800 miles eastward to occupy British South Georgia.

The island group of which the Falklands are among the most western forms the gateway to the Antarctic. Their strategic location plus recent promise for petroleum production make the Falklands more valuable than most realize. By having courage to stand for their rights the Conservative administration in Britain will gain world-stabilizing respect from its constituency, from Latin America and hopefully from the U.S. media.

Very truly yours,
Dr. John Hartford

Christiansen visits AARP convention

Evelyn Christiansen, president of the Berkeley Chapter No. 1538, attended the biennial convention of the American Association of Retired Persons held recently in New Orleans.

She was among more than 2,000 delegates and other association members at the five-day meeting.

Author John V. Gardner, founder of Common Cause, was the recipient of the Ethel Percy Andrus Award, which honors an individual whose outstanding achievements exemplify the participation of older Americans in national life.

Other highlights included the installation of Arthur F. Bouton of Little Rock, Arkansas as president of AARP.

Founded in 1958, AARP is the nation's largest retiree organization, with membership exceeding 13 million.

Adventure camp at Y

ALBANY — The Berkeley-Albany YMCA offers "In-Town-Adventures," a full day adventure program for 5-12 year olds.

The program runs from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. five days a week, from June 21 to Sept. 3. The program is offered at two sites in Berkeley and one in Albany.

Children will participate in a variety of activities, including creative arts, sports, games, films and swimming. Each week there are two field trips to places like the Maritime Museum, Angel Island, Alameda Beach, Fort Point and the Steinhardt Aquarium.

For more information, call the Berkeley-Albany YMCA at 525-1130.

Health care office opens

EL CERRITO — The Herrick Urgent Care Center will hold an open house on Saturday, June 19, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The facility is located at 9949 San Pablo Ave., across from the El Cerrito Plaza.

Free blood pressure checks and computerized health appraisals will be available, as well as a tour of the facility.

The public is invited.

and at the end of the first day he ties three or four similar flies for every member of his party. A fast fly-tier — which Davis said he no longer is — ought to be able to tie as many as three dozen flies an hour.

Because Davis has not taught fly tying before, he said he doesn't know what direction his class will take. Depending upon the desires and abilities of the group, he said he is willing to spend time on any aspect of fly fishing. Davis expects his students to learn as much from one another as they will learn from him.

The class, which begins June 23, will run for six weeks, on Wednesday nights, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. June 23. Cost will be $15 for residents of El Cerrito, and $18 for non-residents. Anyone who is interested in enrolling should call Karen Emmons at the El Cerrito Community Center, at 525-6748.

The class will end by July 28. It has to be that way, so Davis will be free to return to Idaho at the end of August, as he has most every year since he moved to California. When the streams are lowest, and the trout are feeding from the surface, Glenn Davis will be out there in his waders, searching for the one-pound rainbow.

"If I can't get some action every half hour, it's OK," Davis said. "He and I both know why we're out there."

Summer drama classes for teens set

EL CERRITO — The Contra Costa Civic Theatre is sponsoring a special summer drama and dance program for teens.

Karin Anderson will teach the dance class. Currently a junior at USC, she has performed in many CCCT productions including "Gypsy" and "Bye Bye Birdie." She has choreographed "The Music Man" at Kennedy High.

Tedd McClellan, a full time student at the Drama Studio of London (at Berkeley) will instruct the drama classes. He has performed in "Hello Dolly" and "Good News."

Each six-week class is $25, with a special rate of $45 for teens wishing to take both drama and dance classes. For registration call 527-6867 for drama or 526-0819 for dance.

Workshop set on health for elders

On Saturday, June 26, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., the Over-60 clinic is sponsoring "Preventive Health Care for Older Persons."

The conference will be held at the North Berkeley Senior Center on Hearst and Grove streets in Berkeley.

The program will open with keynote speaker Marian Diamond, UC-Berkeley professor of physiology and anatomy. She will be followed by nurse practitioners Jean Maderis and Gayle Stuart, speaking on preventive health care from infancy to old age.

Representatives from local health care centers will describe their facilities. After lunch, staff members will discuss the services and facilities available at the clinic.

For information, call 644-6060.

ARE YOU TOO OLD FOR ROLLER COASTERS?

There's one thing about roller coasters. They go up. And they come down.

In January of 1980 gold hit the dizzying height of $875 an ounce. On June 8, 1982 it was selling for $331 an ounce.

In the last couple of years a flawless one-karat investment diamond nose-dived from about $60,000 to $18,000.

Pork belly futures. Ancient Greek drachmas. Puts. Calls. Options. Yes, the world is full of exciting ways to invest your money these days.

Take the plunge, hold your breath, cross your fingers, what fun!

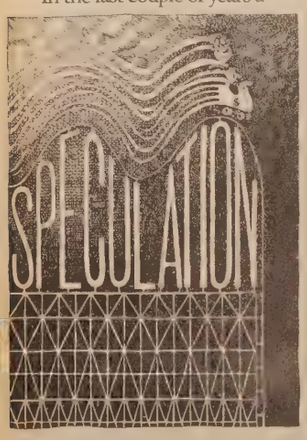
Add to that the state the world is in today.

Spiraling federal deficits.
Recession.
Uncertainty.

If you're 23 years old, that's one thing. You've got decades to recover from any kind of setback.

But if you're not 23 any more, a life of thrills probably isn't where you're at.

So maybe you should be at Allstate Savings.



OUR T-BILLS AND MINI T-BILLS.

If you're looking for a safe, secure way to earn a steady, reliable high interest rate on your savings, Allstate Savings recommends our 6-month T-Bill or 91-day Mini T-Bill.

Both have guaranteed rates of return for the full term of the account, and are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation—which itself is now supported by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government.

Safer than that, there ain't.

T-BILL CERTIFICATE
Rate: 12.753%	Annualized Yield: 13.351%
For the period of 6/15/82 to 6/21/82

MINI T-BILL CERTIFICATE
Rate: 12.248%	Annualized Yield: 13.010%
For the period of 6/15/82 to 6/21/82

If left on deposit for 365 days at the current rate. Renewal at maturity, subject to the rates then prevailing. Federal regulations prohibit compounding of interest on these accounts.

The T-Bill has a $10,000 minimum, the Mini T-Bill $7,500. Both are subject to a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

For further information about either account, or any of our other financial services such as interest-earning checking, stop at any Allstate Savings office or call collect (213) 240-5913.

Note of thanks

Hooray for parents

We at Vista Elementary School would like to express our appreciation to the Vista P.T.A. and to the parent volunteers who give so generously of their time and knowledge to our students.

Their contributions include supervising art and cooking projects, reading stories aloud and helping the children write their own stories, correcting papers, supervising overnight campouts, helping with Activity Day and other special activities.

Most of all, the volunteers provide the children with essential encouragement and support. Our thanks to:

Laurie and Ed Accurso, Clelia Curry, Faye Scarbrogh, Robin Adler, John and Peggy Thomsen, Yvonne Tallerico, Yukiko Ando, Jeanne O'Connor and Cheryl Theis.

Also, Kazuko Aovagi, Karen Allen, Judy Tanaka, Meheran Razak Azhar, Vera Trapp, Noriko Tonoike, Mary Burmesty, Debra Frazer and Chaiki Wada.

Rosemarie Chavez, Dr. Richard Rosenquist, Sam Wainwright, Caroline Cooke, Dr. Stephen Goldstone, Catherine Webb, Robin Cowan, the Bjorks and Bonnie Wilson.

In addition, Bo Curry, Charles and Helen Nakoa, Janelia Booth, Sandy Ferguson, Jeannette Mehren, Joan Champion, Nelly Geraud, Judy Mordecai and Kay Rabin.

Leo and Bernadette Henry, Haydeh, Dianna Thomsen, Joanne Howley, Hiroko, Soosan Adham, Patti Lasagna, Maria Perez, Mitchell.

Also Debra Laws, Mark and Vicki Pa cent Reguzzoni, Roberto Ledesma, Flora borah Singer, the Lings, Laura Rosenthal, Laura Kinney, Karen Lowes, Lais Sandoz Lucia and Karen Slobod.

Libraries plan reading game

Children looking for vacation excitement are invited to play "Readers of the Lost Parchment," a summer reading game at the twelve branches of the Alameda County Library.

All children who can read are eligible and those who begin early enough to finish 10 books by mid-July will win a free pass to an Oakland A's baseball game.

"You are in the library reaching for a book on the top shelf when 'Ouch!' two other books fall down. Out of one of them slides an old yellow piece of paper - a map with funny writing on it." So begins the "Readers of the Lost Parchment" game.

"In the past," explains Coordinator of Children's Services Bruce Vogel, "our reading games have resembled popular board games. This year we have broken away from the game board format - not because it wasn't popular but because we wanted to try something else."

The format is based on a popular new series of children's books called the "Choose Your Own Adventure" series. In this type of story the child reads until a point at which he or she must make a choice for the character. Will you consult Professor Glockenspiel or will you try to figure out the secret writing by yourself? If you ask the Professor turn to page 2; if you try to solve it yourself turn to page 3.

The story will tke different turns depending upon the child's choice. The way the library is playing the game, the child must read a book in order to earn the page which tells him how his choice worked out.

Alameda County operates libraries in Albany, Castro Valley, Dublin, Fremont, Newark, Pleasanton, San Lorenzo and Union City.

Learning to protect Social Security

Social Security Can Be Saved is the topic of a Gray Panther Forum, scheduled for Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. to noon at the Berkeley Unitarian Fellowship at Cedar and Bonita.

Speakers will be Andy Gould, of the Social Security office; Teresa Ghilarducci, who works at the Institute of Industrial Relations at UC-Berkeley; and Rubin Hodess, a Gray Panther member.

The program is free, wheelchair accessible and open to the public. For further information call the Berkeley Gray Panthers at 845-5208.

Mary Heath, Roderick Walter marry

Dunsmuir Gardens in Oakland was setting for the outdoor wedding of Mary Frances Heath of El Cerrito and Roderick Walter of Berkeley on Saturday, May 22.

She is the daughter of Lou Allie Heath of Richmond, and the late Drum Heath. Her attendants were her sister, Vivian Hamilton, and her niece, Sarah Hamilton, both of San Jose.

The groom's attendants were his brother, Kenneth Walter of Seattle, and his son, Richard Walter of Canada.

Guiding the ceremony, which was written and spoken entirely by the bridal couple, was the Rev. Richard Boeke of the First Unitarian Church of Berkeley.

The Horizon Wind Quintet performed music for the ceremony and during the catered buffet on the lawn area for several hundred guests.

The couple honeymooned first at Sea Ranch on the coast and will go to Maine this summer. Their live in El Cerrito.

The bride is a graduate of University of Pacific and is employed at the Contra Costa County Health Department in Martinez. Walter, an ordained Unitarian minister, is a graduate of Starr King Seminary of Berkeley, and is employed as Pacific Central District executive of the Unitarian-Universalist Association in Berkeley.

The bride's father taught at Richmond High School for about 25 years and also was a builder. Her mother was also a teacher at Roosevelt Junior High and Helms. Both retired from teaching in 1968, and she still runs the family business, Drum Heath Inc., Real Estate Investments.

New CIL program helps disabled kids adjust to life

Some disabled students wonder if there is life after high school.

Model Approaches to Life Transition for the Disabled is a new three-year project of Berkeley's Center for Independent Living.

Funded by the U.S. Department of Education, the project is designed to help severely-disabled persons make the difficult transition from the school years to whatever lies beyond — college, a job, improved independent living skills or community involvement.

It's also designed to help people as young as 13 prepare to make this transition.

MALTD is currently seeking severely-disabled young people who want to acquire morg of the skills and confidence that they will need to live independently.

According to project director Celeste White, "It's never easy for kids to leave home and make their own way, but it's especially hard when kids are disabled.

"There's a big crack between the world of school and the world of adulthood. More and more disabled kids are falling into that crack and never climbing out.

"You can't just wait until a kid is 18 to 21 and then tell him, 'Okay, you're on your own — JUMP!'

"You've got to prepare the kid for that jump, and you've got to help him make it. That's what our project is about."

White urges parents, educators, and other professionals to contact her at CIL (841-4776, Ext. 38), if they know of youths who might benefit from the program.

The project serves persons with a wide range of disabilities - physical limitation, impairment of vision and hearing, emotional illness, developmental disability, degenerative illness, learning disability, and "invisible disabilities" like epilepsy.

Potential clients include people like Jerry, 19, who doesn't expect to graduate with other kids his age. He's had cerebral palsy since birth, and he's also mildly retarded, so he's way behind in the academic race.

Since her mother's car skidded and slammed into a concrete abutment four years ago, Erika, 16, has been a quadriplegic. She wants to attend college.

Joanna, 21, has never been to high school at all. She's been in a mental institution for 10 years. She's free at last but she doesn't know a lot about coping with the world outside the hospital.

MALTD clients will have access to all CIL facilities housing, attendant referral, financial advocacy, peer counseling, deaf and blind services, and wheelchair repair.

Experienced case-workers will also provide referrals to different agencies, information about various community resources, and education and vocational counseling.

According to White, disabled youths have a variety of problems, some educational and vocational, and some strictly personal.

One teen-ager, from a "special school," wants to meet non-disabled people his own age. A client with dyslexia wants extra time and help for school exams. A deaf boy wants to communicate with neighborhood friends who don't know sign language.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is a hand from H. W. Kelsey's "Killing Defense at Bridge." It doesn't really show killing defense, but merely illustrates the expert mind at work.

You open the king of spades against South's four-heart contract. Your partner plays the three and declarer drops the queen.

You shift to the jack of diamonds. Then low from dummy, eight from East, king from declarer. The declarer plays ace to another trump. You lead your king and must promise to try to get two more tricks.

Incidentally, your partner has echoed with high trumps to show that he has three of them. So you know declarer held a six-card heart suit. Your partner played the eight of diamonds and surely holds the nine. Declarer bid one heart, jumped to three with only high card points outside a club suit. Obviously, he must hold the ace and queen of clubs and one or two more hearts.

If he holds four clubs, the contract is surely home. If you give him just three. Now he must hold either two diamonds or one spade and a diamond.

If he holds one of each, it is up to you to take your ace of spades before leading a club. 10 of diamonds to save your partner a guess.

You have one point of guidance. If your partner held four spades to the king and the diamond ace, he might have raised to two spades. So you cash your spade ace, lead a diamond and spoil declarer's fun.

Library sets 'bookball'

EL CERRITO — "Play Bookball" is the theme of the Contra Costa County Library System's summer reading program which runs from now through Aug. 7.

By reading 10 books and rating them on the official scorecard, children of all ages will earn a ticket to an Oakland A's game. In addition, a representative from the Oakland A's Youth program will help celebrate the end of the program by showing a film highlighting the A's baseball season.

For further details, contact the El Cerrito Public Library at 526-7512.

E.C High graduates 387

EL CERRITO — Three hundred and eighty-seven seniors were graduated from El Cerrito High School Tuesday night at ceremonies held at the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.

The program opened with a processional, "Pomp and Circumstance," played by the high school orchestra under the direction of Terry Clark, followed by the pledge of allegiance led by Tobin K. Richmond and an invocation by the Rev. Raymond Narusawa of the East Bay Free Methodist Church in El Cerrito.

The choir, under the direction of Richard Gray, sang Lutkin's "The Lord Bless and Keep You" and "Times of Your Life."

School Superintendent Richard Lovette presented greetings and "Farandole" was played by the orchestra. Student speakers Amy Parmeter and Victor Libet spoke on "Communication: A Tool for the Future" and "The Last Option."

Diplomas were presented to graduating seniors by Principal James Nelson, assisted by call class president Tonya Williams and spring class president Tobin K. Richmond.

Briefs

New tennis tourney set

ALBANY — A Lipton Iced Tea Mixed Doubles qualifying tournament will be held at Memorial Park (Portland and Pomona, Albany), on June 26 and 27.

"Mixed Doubles teams should take advantage of this unique opportunity to compete in a strictly amateur, national tournament," said the tournament director, USPTA tennis pro Jose Morales of Albany. For details, contact Morales at Albany Park & Recreation Dept., 644-8514.

Amateurs of all abilites may compete in the National Tennis Week nationwide tournament. Winners proceed to one of 128 sectional events from which the winning team advances to one of 32, one-day regional playoffs. Regional winners will be flown all-expenses-paid to the national finals in Ponte Vedra, Florida.

Energy aid available

Catholic Charities, Oakland, has funding under the state's Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, to help eligible low-income households in the cities of Alameda, Albany and Emeryville with the costs of their gas and electric bills.

Eligibility for the program is established on the basis of total household income and the existance of an emergency situation due to inability to pay a utility bill.

Income limits range from $467/month for a one person household to $915/month for a household of four. Details regarding application may be obtained by calling the Energy Assistance Program at Catholic Charities, 834-5656.

Parent aid groups slated

ALBANY — Family Services of Albany is sponsirng parent education workshops and parent support groups.
